A tour of five Fort Collins gardens designed with wildlife in mind will be sponsored by Fort Collins Audubon Society on Saturday, July 14, 2007. Visitors may purchase a guidebook for the tour from sponsors, including Fort Collins Nursery, Ranchway Feeds, Wild Birds Unlimited, and Bath Nursery. The self-guided tour will run from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Each garden exhibits a different approach to designing a bird, butterfly, or other wildlife-friendly garden. Ranging from a small suburban backyard to several acres, and primarily designed and built by the owners, each garden is distinctive. Each offers a learning opportunity for visitors to create their own wildlife-friendly garden by adding plantings and features to support the food, shelter, and water needs of animals. Cost for the tour will be $12 in advance and $15 at the gardens, with children’s tickets available at the gardens for $5.

Breeding Bird Atlas Needs Volunteers

Field work is already underway for Colorado’s second Breeding Bird Atlas. This five year project will repeat the fieldwork conducted during the first Atlas (1987–1993). Volunteer field workers are needed to confirm bird species breeding in Atlas survey blocks around the state. Survey blocks (about 3 miles on a side) occur in each USGS 7.5 minute topographic map.

If you are interested in participating in this endeavor, you can sign up for an Atlas survey block in Larimer and Weld counties by contacting Connie Kogler, who is the Regional Coordinator for our area (970-622-9710 or ckgler@mac.com). Connie covers the area found on pages 19, 20, 21, and 94 of the DeLorme Gazateer for Colorado. If you wish to participate in a different part of Colorado, contact Tony Leukering at tony.leukering@rmbo.org. For general information about the Atlas, visit the website http://rmbo.org/specialproj/atlas2.html.

Looking Forward to Fall 2007 Programs

We have an exciting fall lineup of Fort Collins Audubon Society programs scheduled beginning in September. Be sure to watch future issues of the Ptarmigan for more specific details. We surely don’t mean to hurry your wonderful summer months, so enjoy and plan ahead for fall!

September 13 — Kevin Cook, Naturalist and Author, has offered to do a book signing of the newly released book, Good Birders Don’t Wear White: 50 Tips From North America’s Top Birders. He will also share some of his personal birding experiences. Kevin is one of 50 authors who wrote essays on birding experiences and tips for this book. He will be graciously donating ALL book sale proceeds that evening to FCAS. Kevin explained he received a flat fee for his contribution to the book—so he receives no future royalties from book sales. We appreciate his generosity to FCAS! Kevin is familiar to FCAS members through the birding, wildflower, and natural history classes he offers, and the weekly column he writes for local newspapers. Visit www.fortnet.org/audubon to see classes offered by Kevin this summer. Don’t miss the opportunity this September to add a signed copy of this new book to your birding book collection.

October 11 — Ken Strom, Bird Conservation Director for Audubon Colorado, will be speaking to us about “Wind Power and Wildlife in Colorado.” He will address the need to be vigilant about the proper placement of wind farms and individual wind turbines to try and minimize disruption and fragmentation of sensitive habitats, and reduce collision mortality. Visit www.audubon.org/ for an article on a recent National Research Council report on wind power and the need for more study on this alternative energy option.

November 15 — Daniel Glick, International Journalist and author, will be speaking to us on “Rising Tides, Melting Glaciers, and a Changing Planet: Are Humans Divorcing Mother Nature?” Daniel has written numerous articles for national magazines about wildlife and threats to their existence and habitat. They include: Smithsonian, January 2007 – Pronghorn migration in Wyoming; National Wildlife, Dec/Jan 2007 – cover story about polar bears and how they are being affected by global warming; National Geographic, April 2006 – Glen Canyon; Audubon, March/April 2006 – Re-introduction of Mexican wolves.

Daniel Glick is also a published book author: Monkey Dancing is an account of Daniel’s world travels with his two children, his desire for them to see endangered natural wonders of the world, and how humankind relates to nature. This book won the Colorado Book Award in 2004. Powder Burn: Arson, Money, and Mystery on Vail Mountain is an account of the multi-million dollar arson that occurred at Vail ski resort in 1998, and was a Denver Post bestseller. For more interesting information about Daniel Glick and direct links to national magazine articles he has written, visit his website at www.DanielGlick.net. Daniel Glick’s books will be available for sale before and after the meeting. This will be a program you won’t want to miss!

December 14 — We will hold our traditional potluck and this year we will be showing the PBS-produced video, “Pale Male.” This delightfully narrated documentary of the Red-tailed Hawk, “Pale Male,” who took up residence in 1995 on the balcony of a 5th Avenue high-rise apartment bordering New York’s Central Park, is sure to warm your heart and want you to applaud the persistence of this raptor and his mates over the past 12 years. Pale Male and his current mate, Lola, have nested again in 2007, and are raising a brood of two chicks. Checkout the website www.palemale.com to see current updates and pictures of the pair and chicks, as a preview to the showing of Pale Male, in December.

Sea Kayak Trip 2007

The San Juan Islands, Washington – 5-day Trip

Date: August 27–31 (Monday–Friday), 2007
Cost: $780 (includes $60 donation to Fort Collins Audubon Society)

With over 200 rocky, forested islands to explore, the San Juan Archipelago is a superb kayak destination. You'll experience the fun of paddling and camping on remote islands accessible only by boat! Harking back to an earlier time, the islands were used by the native Lummi and Swinomish tribes as summer fishing camps. The pristine waters of the San Juan and Gulf Islands are host to over 80 resident orca whales. Other wildlife sightings may include minke whales, Dall's porpoises, seals, and eagles.

Itinerary. Stuart Island will be your first destination as you paddle north past Spieden Island. On day two, you'll circumnavigate Stuart Island and paddle past the abandoned Coast Guard lighthouse with Vancouver Island to your west and a good chance to sight whales. Your third day will be a layover day; you'll do an easy hike to Turn Point situated on a rocky bluff with the Canadian San Juan Islands to the west. After dinner, you'll have the option of participating in an evening “bioluminescence” paddle with marine life that glows at night. On the fourth day, you'll break camp and paddle to Jones Island owned by Washington State Parks, which has gorgeous waterfront campsites. On day five, you'll paddle to the south side of San Juan Island where your trip will conclude between 1:00 and 3:00 p.m.

Trip Logistics. You are responsible for providing your own transportation to Friday Harbor on San Juan Island where your trip begins. From the Seattle/Tacoma (SeaTac) Airport, take the shuttle to the Anacortes ferry or drive a rental car. From Anacortes, take the ferry to Friday Harbor, which accommodates walk-ons and motor vehicles.

How to Sign Up
Our outfitters (www.centennialcanoe.com) will provide all safety equipment, guides, kayaks, and great food. Cost of the trip is $780, of which $60 is donated back to FCAS. You will need to bring basic personal supplies. The trip is limited to 20 participants, so sign up early to reserve your place. A deposit of $300 per person must accompany your reservation request, and the balance is due by July 13. For further details and to register for the trip, contact Centennial Canoe Outfitters, 1-877-353-1850 (toll free) and be sure to tell them you heard about it from Fort Collins Audubon Society.

More details are posted on the Fort Collins Audubon Website www.fortnet.org/Audubon
Recently, I enjoyed a walk along the Poudre River with the 2007 graduates of the city’s Master Naturalist Program. What an experience! We didn’t walk very far; we meandered; we chatted; we stopped and watched birds; we got wet (it rained); we identified a wildflower that grew in yellow profusion along a dike (tansy); we slipped on wet grass: we were muddy and cold; it was wonderful!

At one point, on our left was the riparian corridor of the Poudre with blooming chokecherry and the pale green of freshly leafed-out trees; on our right was a field of grasses that contained remnants of the debris from the sugar beet industry. Walking on, we came to the wetlands of Cattail Chorus Natural Area. I pondered the toll of time and human habitation on the land and wondered what it looked like to early settlers. I imagined it looked like unlimited resources, but today, through the trees and across the river, the businesses along Mulberry are visible and the sound of traffic is constant. The resources do have a limit.

I wondered what this walk would look like if we visited it once a month throughout a year. How would it change with the seasons? What would it sound like? What would it feel like? What would we see? What color would it be? And, a program was born!

This summer I’ll be developing the “Second Saturday Natural History Walk” series where we’ll take a walk in the same area each month for a year. On each visit we’ll examine new information about life in the area—birds, plants, insects, and humans. Participants can record their observations by journaling, drawing, and/or photographing. Change will be the constant in this adventure. Check each issue of the Ptarmigan for the topic of the month.

And perhaps, for me, the most special part of this venture is the fact that the path is handicapped accessible. While touring with my brother (a heart attack and stroke victim who uses a wheelchair) around Colorado, I became sensitized to how difficult simple pleasures—like taking a nature walk—can be. This walk is planned with accessibility a priority.

Sometimes, master naturalists with special knowledge in a particular field will join us to offer a new perspective on the area. The program will offer everyone an opportunity to think about this place we call home—what it was, what it is, and what it can be.

Look for details about time and place in Audubon’s next issue of the Ptarmigan and JOIN US in September for the “Second Saturday Natural History Walk.”
